Agricultural Credits

Auricoin invests in rural people because Auricoin believes that empowering farmers is the right way to help reduce poverty. Increasing food security will improve nutrition and strengthen people's resilience. We have to serve the agricultural sector with low-interest loans for projects that reach the greatest number of people. We join with the agricultural sector to develop the food and agriculture sector.

If we do not invest in protecting biodiversity, development will never be sustainable and we will fail to eradicate hunger and achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, balanced and sustainable over time.

Biodiversity is a cornerstone of healthy and sustainable food systems.

Let's even give credit for protecting pollinators, improving soil fertility and increasing resilience to the effects of climate change, biodiversity is critical to combating hunger around the world. Biodiversity must be developed before it is too late. The future of most of the world's population depends on it.
